U.S. Servicemen Marked Passover Around The World

From the frozen U.S. station in Thule, Greenland, near the North Pole, to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, where American servicemen are on ready alert, Jewish serviceman and their families marked the ancient Festival of Passover, thanks to arrangements made by the National Jewish Welfare Board (JWB), organizer of global "Operation Passover" for the military and their dependents and patients in veterans' hospitals. JWB efforts made possible services and Seder meals at U.S. stations in Korea and Japan, in the jungles of Panama, at missile and radar stations in the Arctic, in old synagogues of Morocco, Turkey, and Greece, and even on U.S. warships on the high seas during the holiday.

Tons of matzoth, wine, chicken, fish, and other holiday kosher foods, along with haggadahs (prayer books telling of the liberation) and a variety of religious articles, were shipped by J.W.B. for the services at which 370 full- and part-time Jewish chaplains officiated in the U.S., Europe, North Africa, Asia, Alaska, Iceland, and the Caribbean. Committees across the U.S., affiliated with J.W.B.'s Women's Organizations' division, sent hundreds of Passover foods boxes ("solo Seders") to remote overseas stations where chaplains would not be present. Helping in the setting up of Passover services and hospitality in the U.S. and overseas were the 265 J.W.B. Armed Services committees and the USO-JWB field staff, who worked with the Jewish chaplains.

J.W.B. is the agency authorised by the U.S. government to serve the religious and morale needs of Jewish GIs and their families and hospitalized veterans. J.W.B. is also one of the six member agencies of USO, which is currently marking its 20th anniversary. In its global "Operation Passover," J.W.B. carried out one of USO's basic aims, to serve the needs of American servicemen of all faiths. J.W.B. is also a beneficiary of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater N.Y. At the U.S. Naval station in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, several hundred servicemen sat down at a Seder to be conducted by Chaplain Cyrus Arfa, who was flown by the Air Force to the base. The holiday needs of GIs at all U.S. stations in the Caribbean were taken care of thanks to a 10,000-mile pre-holiday flight by Rabbi Nathan Witkin, USO-JWB staffer, in Balboa, C.Z.

Through his efforts a little group of men from the Navy Radar Guided Missile station in the Leeward Islands, B.W.I., were able to come to the mass Seder in San Juan, P.R., set up by the local J.W.B. Armed Services committee. Others who took part in Passover missions to distant bases were: Chaplain Herbert I. Berger, of Lackland Air Force Base, Tex., who flew to Iceland; Chaplain Paul S. Laderman, of Lowry Air Force Base, Col., who officiated in the Azores; and Rabbi Morton Kantor, of Bay Shore, L.I., who conducted the Seder in Bermuda.

In Ascom City, Korea, GIs came from as far north as the Demilitarized Zone to the four-day Passover Retreat conducted by Chaplains Sheldon Lilker and Leonard Borstein. Children of KMAG (Korean Military Advisory Group) personnel attending the Seders assisted in the asking of the Four Questions. For those unable to come to the Retreat, the chaplains provided Passover food boxes, one of which reached the single Jewish officer on the small island of P-Y-Do, off North Korea. Mass Seders were set for all the giant bases in Japan, where hundreds gathered, in addition, for services at the Jewish Community Center in Tokyo. Officiating at Seders in Japan were Chaplains Arnold Rudin, Morton H. Narrowe, and Arthur Langenauer.

The story of the ancient liberation was recited in Ankara, Turkey, where a pre-holiday flight of Chaplain Morris Rubinstein made it possible for men to come to the Seder from Adana, Trabzon, Diyabakir, and Karaarmursel. The traditional Four Questions were asked at U.S. bases in Germany, England, Italy, and France. In the last-named place, Benjamin Wolfson, J.W.B. Armed Services worker for the European area, coordinated Seder services and hospitality for men in the Paris area, and cooperated with Chaplain Allan Blustein. USO-JWB staffer, Robert Kirsch, aided in Passover hospitality arrangements in Italy, where he served U.S. GIs and men from the NATO forces.

USO-JWB staffers and chaplains saw to the stocking of ships of the Atlantic Fleet with holiday sup-

W. J. C. Prepares Nazi Roster For Eichmann Trial

The World Jewish Congress in New York has prepared a "who was who" of about 1,500 Nazi war criminals and collaborators to assist the prosecution during the forthcoming trial of Adolf Eichmann in Israel. It names, among others, twelve members of Eichmann's Commando unit, many of whom are still alive, and a number of his principal aides.

Samuel Bronfman, of Montreal, chairman of the North American Division of the World Jewish Congress, explained that the Eichmann trial would certainly produce references to other Nazis who have been tried, or are being sought, as well as to persons who were indirectly responsible for the mass murder of six million Jews. The 96-page World Jewish Congress' document, "Preliminary List of Persons Accused or Suspected of Crimes Against Humanity," could well serve as a reference book at the trial, Mr. Bronfman noted.

Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, director of the World Jewish Congress institute of Jewish Affairs, who prepared the list, said that it consisted of a number of categories: Nazis and Fascists tried and sentenced; Nazis and Fascists dead or executed; war criminals still at large or under investigation; those who committed suicide or disappeared; as well as high-ranking members of the German armed forces and diplomatic corps who served during the Hitler regime. But the World Jewish Congress' expert on war criminals points out in an introduction to the list that "not every person who was active during the Nazi period in any office of importance" or who is included in the roster "must of necessity be a criminal."

Dr. Robinson said that the list contained the names of some persons whose crimes were not established but who, because of their prominent position, were likely to at least have had some knowledge of the Nazi acts. Dr. Robinson has termed the list "preliminary" because it will be expanded for publication at a later date. Included in the "who was who" are some persons now living in the United States: Andrija Artukovic, listed

Israel Reassures Adenauer On Eichmann Trial

The Israeli government has privately informed Chancellor Konrad Adenauer that it wants to prevent the trial of Adolf Eichmann, which began on April 10 in Israel, from causing a setback to recently improved relations between Israel and West Germany.

This assurance, it was learned, has been conveyed to Dr. Adenauer through the Israeli mission at Cologne in unpublicized discussions about the prosecution of the former head of the Gestapo's Jewish department, says the New York Herald Tribune. Even with this assurance, Dr. Adenauer and many of his associates expect a new wave of anti-German feeling abroad when the concentration camp atrocities of the Nazi regime are spelled out again before an Israeli court.

However, according to reliable informants, the Israelis have at least allayed the West German government's apprehensions on two matters.

First, they have informed Dr. Adenauer they do not intend to handle the Eichmann trial in a way that "would put German-Jewish relations back to where they were in 1945." Second, they have said that Eichmann's testimony on his role in the murder of millions of European Jews, may involve comparatively few disclosures about German war criminals that are not already public knowledge.

Eichmann's roster of his German war criminal associates is said to be divisible into three principal categories: first, many por-

Claims North Has More Negroes In "Segregated" Schools Than South

An official of the American Jewish Congress charged that school boards in the North were perpetuating "de facto" segregation. Will Maslow, new executive director of the Congress, told the Law Forum at Villanova, Pa., University that more Negro children attended segregated schools in Northern cities than in Southern metropolitan centers, says the New York Times. He said the responsibility rested with the school boards.

Mr. Maslow charged that the boards held to the neighborhood concept even though the neighborhood might have been gerry-mandered or altered to accommodate only Negroes. This, he said, is unconstitutional in many cases and automatically established de facto situations.

Mr. Maslow said that while virtually all Northern school boards had adopted a "color-blind" attitude, the New York City Board of Education had taken a "color-conscious" position with its efforts to eliminate or reduce segregation. He praised the board for its "open-enrollment" policy, which permits pupils to transfer out of their neighborhoods, and the Higher Horizons programs, which offer cultural opportunities to those who otherwise would not receive them.

A survey made by the American Jewish Congress, Mr. Maslow said, showed that New York City had seventy-five elementary

Psychiatrist: Foster Care Children Need More Help

A hard look at the present foster-care program for children is warranted by findings of a study of serious emotional disturbances among 140 foster care children getting psychiatric treatment, said Dr. Leon Eisenberg, Associate Professor of Psychiatry and Pediatrics at The Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, in Baltimore. He said that comparisons indicated that foster-care children were accepted for psychiatric treatment at a rate ten times that of other children.

Dr. Eisenberg reported his findings at the annual conference of the American Orthopsychiatric Association at the Statler-Hilton Hotel, in New York. He also discussed the social implications of his findings.

In general he found that the disturbed children had experienced a high rate of replacement from one home to another, says the New York Times. More than half of them had had three or more placements, more than a third more than four, and about one-fifth had been shuttled through five or more foster homes.

The children had originally come from poor, disorganized, even depraved home environments. They suffered from a variety of mental disorders and exhibited extreme behavior problems.

Seventy per cent were referred for aggressive behavior; half were

● HEBREW FREE LOAN ●
Association opened its new premises at 5775 Victoria Avenue, after forty-two years of expediting loans, without interest, from offices at 2003 St. Lawrence Boulevard. The occasion was celebrated at an afternoon sherry party at the new location with invited guests. The Association, since its founding in 1911 by Zigmond Fineberg, has helped people from all walks of life who never had to pay interest or service charges. It was said by William Levy, president since 1949, that borrowers at the Hebrew Free Loan are people whose self-respect does not permit them to receive doles, but does permit them to receive money they can repay. Capital for loans comes from contributions, legacies, bequests; operational expenses from annual subscriptions to the membership fund. The move to Victoria Avenue was made when owners of the previous space required it for expansion. The relocation in the west end will accommodate a majority of borrowers and facilitate the lending program. In 1960 loans totalled some $700,000, more than double the amount loaned in 1950. Other officers are: Harry Gasco, Joseph Guttman, vice-presidents; treasurer, Myer Caplan; honorary secretary, David Kaufman; directors until 1962 are: Harry J. Berger, Gordon Brown, David Dubin, David Gillick, Lewis Rosenfeld, Max Routtenberg, Samuel Shiff. Officers honored for years of service are: Abraham Albert, honorary vice-president; Hyman Shiller, honorary vice-president; honorary directors: Jacob Chananie, Harry Gordon, Hyman Grover, Henry Nathanson, Aaron Nirenberg.

U.S. SERVICEMEN MARKED PASSOVER

plies. In Norfolk, for instance, special tapes of the Passover services were put on ships, thanks to the efforts of Chaplain Samuel Sobel, of the Norfolk, Virginia, Naval base. An alert to the J.W.B. from its USO staffer in Boston made possible the stocking of the USS Edisto with Passover supplies for the two Jewish men aboard, just before the ship sailed. Months-long efforts in the U.S. by Jewish full- and part-time chaplains, USO-JWB staffers and local Armed Services Committees, resulted in on-post and community Seders for men from such large stations as Fort Bragg, N.C., Fort Bliss, Tex.; Fort Sill, Okla.; Lackland Air Force Base, Tex.; Fort Riley, Kan.; Fort Dix, N.J.; Fort Knox, Kentucky; and Travis Air Force Base, Calif. On-post hospitality for the Passover week was furnished at many of the larger posts through the setting up of kosher kitchens and mess halls.

In Philadelphia, J.W.B.-affiliated groups provided over 500 Passover parcels, some for use overseas and a number for domestic bases and veterans hospitals. Fifty "solo Seders" were sent to a remote area overseas by Jewish women's groups in Louisville affiliated with the Women's Organizations' Division of J.W.B. Passover activities included: setting up of home hospitality; organization of Passover institutes and model Seders for GI families; special Seder arrangements for men at the U.S. Air Force Academy, U.S. Naval Academy, and U.S. Military Academy. In Los Angeles, 100 synagogues were involved in services and hospitality.

Passover was marked in most of the Veterans Administration Hospitals in the U.S. and overseas. Ambulatory patients attended services in the hospitals or in adjacent communities. Special arrangements were made by J.W.B. committees for the disabled, including the mental cases. Several hundred mental patients were served at a Seder, for instance, at the Brentwood VA Hospital in Los Angeles, and at the Northport, L.I., Veterans Hospital, through the efforts of local J.W.B. committees.

FOSTER CARE

in serious difficulties at school; a third stole; a fifth were involved in deviant sexual behavior. There was marked backwardness in school, although only 15 per cent came within the generally accepted range for mental deficiency.

Even though these children had been placed in foster homes as good as a conscientious public welfare agency could provide, they persisted in behavior patterns that reflected their earlier deprived home life, the therapists found.

Many were apathetic and mistrustful, suspicious of adults, had poor images of themselves and found it difficult to show affection for adults. Many continued to behave in the same primitive way after starting treatment, it was found.

"Eating and toileting behavior is primitive. Particularly striking is the complaint of a ravenous appetite in a significant number of these children," Dr. Eisenberg reported.

The children may stuff themselves until they vomit; they may steal food from pantry and garbage can even though food is readily available. In many cases the foster parents brought the child in for care because of alarm over the persistence of this eating pattern, Dr. Eisenberg said.

The fact that these disordered behavior patterns, stemming from the early unpleasant backgrounds, persist under more benevolent care, leaves doubt in his mind as to the efficacy of foster care, Dr. Eisenberg said, according to the New York Times. There is no direct evidence of the reversibility or irreversibility of such psychopathology in children who enter foster care, he said. This fact demands investigation, he suggested.

It is also evident, Dr. Eisenberg remarked, that if the children are to be helped they need much more than they are getting.

Meaning Of The Eichmann Trial

BY IVOR BAVELLE, IN THE ISRAEL DIGEST, OF JERUSALEM

On the eve of the Eichmann trial Professor Arnold Toynbee has publicly compared Jewish behavior towards the Arabs during Israel's War of Independence with Nazi genocide. When challenged by the Israel Ambassador in Canada, Toynbee in fact withdrew his outrageous statement. He characteristically shifted his ground however, and finished up by ambiguously equating the principles of the Nazi "final solution of the Jewish problem" with the general immorality of the historic conduct of all nations.

Toynbee's performance, and some of the public reaction to it, nevertheless remain shocking enough and serve to remind us of the real meaning and importance of the Eichmann trial. These should be considered under three aspects: crime and punishment; humanity's consciousness and conscience; and the enduring verdict of history, involving historic truth and historic justice.

Little need be said about the first of these aspects. The talk about a Jewish thirst for vengeance, about an Old Testament inability to forget and forgive, has clearly anti-semitic motivations and should be rejected with indignation.

Nor is there any truth in the assumption that Israel might encounter some difficulty in applying to the Eichmann case the highest and most impeccable standards of judicial legality. The nations of the world must recall that the idea of law has molded Jewish spiritual tradition for millenia, and they must realize the impact of this historic fact upon the reborn Jewish state.

In Israel as elsewhere, perhaps even more than elsewhere, there are doubts, reservations and sharp differences of opinion on the general subject of capital punishment. However, there should exist no doubts anywhere as to whether a man, if found guilty of some or all of the crimes enumerated in the charge sheet against Eichmann, ought to be brought to justice and punished or ought to be left to go scot free. At any rate, no such doubts are admissible so long as institutions of human justice are maintained upon this earth.

The enormity of the Nazi crimes strains and transcends imagination. Their contemplation causes the ordinary decent person to recoil in dismay and arouses in him an instinctive desire to turn away and close his eyes. This powerful and deep-seated resistance must be overcome so that the realization of the Nazi horror may fully penetrate humanity's contemporary consciousness.

It is this difficulty that is being exploited by apologists of the Nazi regime, by men like Ahmed Shukeiri, or by Arnold Toynbee. There are those who want the facts to be passed over in silence and rapidly forgotten. This is nothing less than what Hitler and his lieutenants intended to happen.

For this purpose they devised an entire dictionary of veiled expressions and conspiratorial formulae designed to hide the truth in its entirety at least from connivingly inclined contemporaries and, later, from posterity. Certain history books at present in use bear witness of these tendencies and endeavours, and one encounters ample, nay overwhelming, evidence of a similar nature both in Germany and in many other countries on its West and East.

Then there are the attempts to minimize the full extent of the crime and of the tragedy, a haggling and lying about the number of the millions of the victims. Above all there is the obstinate and malevolent effort to distort and obscure the very essence of the Nazi genocide: the inhuman, icy, and deliberate resolve; the bloodthirsty, murkily fantastic, and wordy ideology of extermination, implemented with fanatical consistency, with cruelty, thoroughness and circumspection; the self-admiration and vanity of the killers; the chilling bureaucratic planning and handling of the murder machine, and the utter lack of any provocation whatsoever, the complete and absolute innocence of the victims both as individuals and as a community.

Jewish existence is still precarious in the world, and it is essential to appeal to humanity's conscience against anti-Jewish persecution and discrimination in certain countries, as well as against Nasser's scheming and preparations against Israel. Humanity's conscience, however, is receptive and responsive only to a certain degree. And this will depend in turn upon the level of awareness of the Nazi horror which humanity may prove capable of achieving.

Beyond this, however, such an awareness may well represent for the present generation in Germany and elsewhere a necessary element of its moral sanity. This, one would like to believe, is also the sincere understanding of the Protestant churches in Germany, which have appealed to their followers, to consider and ponder the facts that the Eichmann trial will reveal and prove.

It seems, however, that the highest purpose and the profoundest meaning of the trial are related not to the present but to the future.

It has become a commonplace to say that history is always written from a perspective, the perspective of the historian and his epoch, his own cultural and material environment and pattern of values. But we also believe that this does not mean mere chaotic relativism or arbitrariness. There are values that persist, like truth, or peace, or tolerance, or justice. We want moral progress. We want coming generations to attain a higher degree of realization of those values which we perceive to be self-evident and eternal. Peoples and humanity are formed by historic experience, and this means again awareness and knowledge.

It is very important that the historic knowledge and memory of the Jewish people of tomorrow and of the humanity of tomorrow should contain not a distorted or a vague and nebulous picture, but a clear, systematic, detailed, documented and, above all, carefully examined description of the Nazi attempt to destroy Jewry. The Eichmann trial presents an outstanding opportunity to draw up such a description. And since it will be a fair trial indeed it will also meet the stern demand for conclusive and irrefutible proof, proof that will stand the test of history.

as Minister of the Interior in Nazi Croatia; Ferdinand Durcansky, Foreign Minister of Nazi-controlled Slovakia; Laszlo Agh, a Hungarian reserve officer and commandant of a Hungarian labor camp, who was recently deported from the United States. Artukovic is living in California; Durcansky reportedly in the Mid-West. Congressman Utt, of California, recently introduced a Bill in the U.S. House of Representatives that would lawfully admit Artukovic for permanent residence. His extradition has been sought by the Yugoslav Government.

The men who served in Eichmann's Commando are named by Dr. Robinson as: Ferdinand Daurasch; Ernst Girzick; Otto Helschmann; Viktor Nagler; Otto Schwaner; Oskar Senger; Alfred Slavik; Franz Stuschka; Franz Toyfel; Joseph Umschau; Josef Weizel; and Anton Winnlwarter. Other Eichmann aides named are:

S. S. officer Theodor Dannecker, now dead; Lt.-Col. Laszlo Ferenci, liaison between Eichmann and the Hungarian police, sentenced to death in Hungary; S. S. Officer Hartenberger; S. S. Col. Helm, Eichmann's aide in Croatia; Dr. Otto Hunsche, an aide in Hungary now awaiting trial in Germany; Hermann Krumey, who helped Eichmann to deport Hungarian, Austrian, and Polish Jews, now under arrest in Germany; Eichmann transportation chief, Kurt Franz Novak, recently arrested in Austria; Rolf Guenther, Eichmann's deputy in Prague, and his brother, Hans Guenther, head of the Jewish emigration office in Prague, both of whom are under arrest.

The World Jewish Congress document lists alleged Nazis and Nazi collaborators now reported living in different parts of the world:

Argentina: Dido Kvatrenik, formerly Croatian; Josef Mengele, who selected persons for execution in Bergen-Belsen; Jan Durcansky, former Slovakian Minister whose extradition Argentina has refused. Brazil: Baron Bubbi von Alvensleben, Adjutant to Himmler, allegedly responsible for mass executions in Poland; Herbert Cukurs, Latvian collaborator with the Nazis; and R. Striglics, head of the Riga Police during the Nazi occupation. Britain: Nazi aides Veido, and Karlis Vittenbergs, both of whom were district leaders in Latvia.

Sweden: Karlis Vilkancis, Nazi chief in Ludza, Latvia. Egypt: Wilhelm Boeckeler (now known as Abdel Mah Krim), former S.S. officer who participated in the liquidation of the Warsaw Ghetto; Erich Buenz (now known as Ali Allan); Dr. Hans Eisele, Dachau Camp doctor; Karl Holter, former Gestapo official; Dr. Johannes von Leers (now known as Omar Amin von Leers); Albert Thielemann (now known as Aman Khadar), former S.S. leader. Boeckeler, Buenz and Thielemann are reported to be members of Nasser's so-called "Israel Department."

Another ex-Nazi is believed to be in Syria; Alois Anton Brunner, one of Eichmann's deputies in Vienna, Berlin, Paris, and Salonika. The WJC's list is still in the unfinished stage and will be published at a later date.

SAYS NORTH HAS MORE NEGROES

schools with at least 90 per cent Negro and Puerto Rican enrollment.

In Chicago, he said, the survey showed that 87 per cent of the city's Negro elementary school children attended schools that were, "to all intents and purposes, Negro schools" and that forty-three of Los Angeles' elementary schools had Negro enrollments of 85 per cent or more.

In Philadelphia, he said, 14 per cent of the public elementary schools have Negro enrollments of more than 99 per cent.

Most administrators in urban areas, Mr. Maslow contended, have taken no effective steps to alter the pattern of segregation that has arisen from "black ghettoe" in their cities, according to the New York Times. Mr. Maslow suggested the open-enrollment policy now being used in New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, or the "Princeton" plan adopted in Princeton, N.J.

"Under this plan two near-by schools — one in a predominantly Negro area and the other attended primarily by white children — are reclassified so that one school is attended by children in the lower grades and the other by children in the upper grades, thus achieving genuine integration."

He also recommended the Detroit plan under which children from overcrowded Negro schools are transported to under-utilized white schools.

I worked for Adolf Eichmann

Valerie White, a Czech now living in Toronto, tells how she was forced to help "process" thousands of Jews for Eichmann's Central Office. What methods did he use to trap his victims? Why couldn't more Jews escape? As Eichmann's trial begins, this first-hand report reveals the suspense and horror endured by millions of Jews—by a woman who saw it happening, but was powerless to do anything about it.
